THE DEAR OLD SWEET

WHAT IS GOING ON AT THIS PAVORIFE RESORT.

A Large Crewd of People-The Blues' Encampment-Entertainments, &c.

[From a Staff Correspondent.] Sweet Springs, W. Va., August 9, 1887.

The Old Sweet is blessed with great abundance this year. There are more people here now than there have been any season since the war. The hotel is full, the cottages are crowded, and Mr.

Lee, the manager, tells me he would have 500 more guests if he could accommodate them. Every train brings new-comers, and to-day we have 650 people. And what draws them? Certainly not the tiresome journey which all must take as an initiatory step before they can enter the place, for in addition to the railway travel one must ride what seemed to me twenty-seven platform of the State Assembly was The Old Sweet is blessed with great abundance this year. There are more people here now than there have been dition to the railway travel one must ride what seemed to me twenty-seven miles (everybody else says it is only ten and a half) in a stage-coach from the depot. I say that cannot possibly be the attraction; besides it is so very quiet here. When you first come you think you will die of canni in a day or two. One of the female guests—I think she was from the West—remarked the other day. two. One of the female guests—I think she was from the West—remarked the other day: "My goodness gracious, this is one of the deadest places I ever was at! Not a bit of scanda! of the deadest places of resolutions were voted down and a second the deadest places. nobody does anything improper; 1 tual dissating the soles of her No. 5's and left. Well, On Fri what does draw the people here?

THE MAIN ATTRACTION. Truly, the main attraction is the water, which possesses peculiar tonic and health-giving powers; and then the mountain breezes and the beautiful scenery should be thought of; and bescenery should be thought of; and besides, well—the air of the place is so imbued with a sort of indolent, unobtrusive tranquillity and careless, easy freedom that one just from the whirl of city life feels momentarily bored, but this feeling gives way to a permature of the law by flight. The but this feeling gives way to a perma-others were arrested. Jones broke jul nent and growing rest and satisfaction.

There are not a great many Virginians here. The bulk of the crowd ginians here. The bulk of the crowd comes from Kentucky, St. Louis, Chicago, and other western points. The most attractive girl, though, is from Danville—Miss Hickson. She and her almost constant companion, Miss Bassett, of Lexington, Ky., are much alike; both have fair complexions, dark abike; both have fair complexions, dark eyes and bair, lithe and slender forms, and refined, sweet faces. Their very congeniality is evident in their likeness. They are great favorites and have much attention shown them. A very handsome woman is Miss Thorburn, of New York, and her pretty figure is aderned daily with several figure is adorned daily with several elegant gowns. Miss Thorburn spends sermon before the Odd-Fellows of this most of the women are splendidly dressed, perhaps Mrs. Alfred T. Harris and Mrs. D. D. Talley, of Riehmond, take the lead in this respect.
